Commented [KP1]: Not exactly sure of the meaning/intent of this phrase in this context – whose integrity are we developing, and is integrity not something we expect community members to already have and value?
Enactment & Revision History	Commented [KP2]: The phrasing of this sentence reads to me as if the culture of respect is in service to preserving freedom of speech and academic freedom, and not the
08 February 2010 - Policy number revised from 1.000 to 01.00.10 13 April 2000 - Approved by the university president's Small Executive Staff and Promulgated as Policy 12 April 2000 - Unanimously endorsed by the University Senate March 29 2000 - Unanimously endorsed by the Faculty Advisory Council and endorsed by vote of 13-3 by the Student Senate	primary value of our community standards. That, and the fact that the majority of this opening paragraph is about academic freedom / free speech, seems off-balance given that we have 2 other policies specifically regarding academic freedom and free spech. (https://policies.uoregon.edu/content/academic-freedom- 0; https://policies.uoregon.edu/policy/by/1/01- administration-and-governance/freedom-inquiry-and-free- speech) Could this paragraph speak more directly to the
Policy	standards we are holding everyone accountable to, and which are enumerated in the listing below? Here's a proposed edit which retains most of the current wording:
The University of Oregon affirms its commitment to the advancement of knowledge, promotion of respect, and the development of integrity. In order to thrive and excel, this community must preserve the freedom of thought and expression of all its members. The University of Oregon has a long and illustrious history in the area of academic freedom and freedom of speech. A culture of respect and inclusion, both in-person and in online forums, that honors the rights, safety, dignity and worth of every individual is essential to preserve such freedom.	The University of Oregon affirms its commitment to the advancement of knowledge and the promotion of respect for all without discrimination. A culture of respect and inclusion, both in-person and in online forums, that honors the rights, safety, dignity and worth of every individual is essential for this community to thrive and excel. The University of Oregon further affirms its commitment to the freedom of thought and expression of all its members.
Members of the University of Oregon community are expected to:	Deleted: We affirm our respect for the rights and well- being of all members.
